CUP AT BALTUSROL

Plucky Play Gives Him a Victory Over W. M. Sinclair, of Home Club.

Gardiner W. White, of Flushing, won the chief cup in the invitation tournament of the Baltusrol Golf Club yesterday by defeating Wallace M. Sinclair, of the home club, who won the medal in the qualifying round, in a match which was carried to the thirty-seventh green. It was not because the golf was of the highest type that White once more assumed a place in the limelight, as he did some three years ago, but because of the two he was the pluckier when it came to a pinch.

Since White began to play golf in earnest this spring he has been prone to "top" his putts, a habit which has caused him considerable concern. At times this fault developed yesterday, despite the fact that this department of his playing was not affected either at Apawamis or earlier in this tournament. Moreover, a tendency to wildness off the tee or with his irons cost him holes, and he frequently found it necessary to play cut of trouble.

That he put up a game fight, however is shown by the fact that he was a down at the end of the morning round. They were all even at the turn, and White, often requiring just one extra stroke, lost five out of six holes after he had won the tenth. A long nutt at the accententh aided him to win the hole, but Sinclair, with an excellent approach and a good putt, won the eighteenth, making the match stand four holes in his favor.

Fine work on the first three holes of the second round enabled White to come within a hole of his opponent, for Sinclair was as wild as the proverbial hawk. White's putting cost him the fourth and a halve in 6 resulted at the sixth.

Baltuarol seems to have a tradition that no final round is complete without a heavy shower, and at this gtage of the contest the rain fell in torrents. The green at the sixth was actually waterlogged. In fact, White was on the green in two and because of the water splashing in front of his ball he took four putts, whereas he might have won the hole.

Winning the seventh and ninth holes. White was able to square the match at the turn, and then visits to traps almost without number were the result of the play over the inward nine. Through White's mistakes Sinclair was able to win the sixteenth hole in 6 and 7 and level the match once again, but a neat but at the seventeenth enabled White to draw shead, only to lose his advantage on the home hole through a poor second shot.

To the first extra hole White outdrove his opponent by fully 30 yards him a chance for a par 4, which he Coincident with the final rounds was an eighteen hole medal handicap, in which R. F. Mundy, of Ardsley, with so 6-74, led for both gross and net. He took the gross, leaving the other for W. R. Swords, of Oakland, with

New York State Chess Association, announces that the annual midsummer meeting of that organization will take place this year at Schenectady from August 10 to August 14. In all likelihood four clubs will be represented in the competition for the Genesse trophy. In addition there will be the general tournaments, open to players of all classes.

In the exhibition of simultaneous chess given by Julius Finn before the members of the Flushing Chess Club, at Flushing, L. I., the former state champion played twenty-one games, one of which he conducted without seeing board or pieces. This game ha won, together with sixteen of the simultaneous games.

He lost one game to the Rev. Charles L. Newbold, rector of Christ Church, Manhasset, and drew against Captain D. F. O'Connor, J. A. Harris and E. P. Murray. His opponent in the blindfold game was the Rev. D. F. Eccles, rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church at Murphy's Hill, Flushing.

In addition to a demonstration of cad-game studies by Charles S. Anderson at the meeting of the Lyceum Chess Club, of Brooklyn, held in celebration of winning the prize in the Metropolitan League, a rapid transit tournament was held. P. Garms, jr., and C. Kuller were the finalists, but tlayed two successive draws without reaching a decision.

Herbert M. Barrett won the first prize in the "acquaintance" tournament of the Crescent Athletic Club, of Brooklyn, by defeating Frederick Rose in the final round. Hose received the accord prize, while G. P. Sandborn and Paul G. Gravenhorst captured the third and fourth, respectively.

A cable message received by O. Chajes and C. Jaffe, of the Progressive Chess Club, from the committee of the Mannheim Chess Congress announces that the entry list is full and that there is no room for either of the New York experts. Marshall is expected to play, and Capablanca, too, may be a participant.
